3rd Street Plans For Highway No. 67 Given To Council

Highway Department Requests 60-Foot Zone Across City

REQUIRE ORDINANCE

Engineers Lay Proposal Before City at Meeting Last Night

A request by the State Highway Department for 60-foot right-of-way privileges the full length of Third street, to carry No. 67 across the city, was presented to the city council at its meeting last night.

B. B. Brown, district construction engineer under R. B. Stanford, district engineer, submitted a proposed ordinance to the aldermen requesting recognition of future highway needs in the event that the present paving on Third street proves too narrow for truck-line traffic.

Want Room to Expand
It was understood by the councilmen last night that the State Highway Department is not planning to construct any 60-foot paving, but presuming that the present paving on Third street is on a 40-foot right-of-way, the department wants an additional 10 feet protected against new buildings, on either side of the present curbing.

The proposed ordinance would not affect buildings now actually standing, but in the event of rebuilding after a fire, or new construction of any kind, the 60-foot width would have to be observed.
Proposed use of Third street as the route of No. 67 through the city would mean that the state would pay half of all new construction necessary to tie up the city paving with the end of the Hope-Fulton paving project on the west side of the city. It would also mean that the state would assume half the indebtedness of the old improvement districts which constructed the present city paving on Third street, The Star is informed.

Third street is paved from Washington to a considerably ways from the west corporation line, clear across the city to the east boundary line.

Width Not Uniform
It is by no means of uniform width, however. Third street is 24 feet wide from Washington street to the L. & A. tracks; 40 feet wide from that point to South Hazel street, in the heart of the business district; 28 feet from Hazel to Shover; 23 feet on the quarter-block job down Shover; and 24 feet wide from Shover to the east corporation line.

Beyond Washington street, on the west side, where there is no pavement, the State Highway Department is asking the city for a right-of-way 80 feet instead of 60. This stretch from Washington to the federal aid control point where the Hope-Fulton dump ends, will have to be surveyed, graded and paved.

The only other business of importance to come before last night's meeting was re-enactment of the 5-mill city tax, which is adopted every year.

An Alert Commission

STATE public utilities commissions are not, ordinarily, famous for their intelligent zeal to see to it that the consumer gets a 100 per cent square break from utilities companies. Too often the criticism is made that these commissions do the companies more good than they do the consumers.

Consequently it is more than usually gratifying to record a recent action taken by the public utilities commission in Georgia.

The people of Crisp county, in Georgia, got tired of paying what they considered high rates for electricity. So, after public discussion, the county went to work and built its own power plant. The plant was put into operation, and began selling electricity at rates well below those charged by the Georgia Power and Light Company, which had previously had a monopoly in the district.

As soon as this was done the Georgia Power and Light Company announced a reduction of 35 per cent in rates to consumers in Crisp county.

Now that sort of thing isn't unusual. It has happened in pretty nearly every other state in the union. What is unusual, decidedly, is the way the Georgia public utilities commission acted.

It promptly summoned the Georgia Power and Light Company to show some good reason why it should not cut its rates 35 per cent in all the rest of the counties in the state.

There is one utilities commission that remembers that its prime duty is to look out for the interests of the consumers.

To be sure, in commending this action of the commission there is no desire to prejudice the case. It may develop that there are perfectly sound reasons to prevent this 35 per cent reduction from being put into effect in other Georgia counties. That isn't the point.

The point is that the commission has proved itself both alert and sensible. In the common phase, it is on its toes to see that no utility gets away with anything.

Would that more state commissions were equally energetic!

A Study In Selfishness

QUER and revealing sidelights on human nature are occasionally given by lawsuits filed in the courts.

In an Ohio town a farmer is suing to compel the return of his 17-year-old daughter; and the story behind the lawsuit is worth a bit of study.

More than a year ago this farmer owed a debt of some kind to a neighbor couple. In payment of this debt he "leased" his daughter, then 15 years old, to the couple. After a time all hands agreed that the debt, whatever it was, had been satisfied. The farmer asked for the return of his daughter, but the people who had her refused to give her up.

The farmer then went to court, but the local authorities held that his action in bonding out the girl constituted adoption by the couple to whom he owed the debt, and ruled that this couple were now the girl's legal guardians.

More trouble followed. Once the father went to get the girl by force and had a scuffle with her guardians. Once the courts ruled in his favor but the girl and her guardians disappeared when the farmer went to get her. Now the farmer is filing suit for a writ of habeas corpus to compel the girl to return to him.

Now the most interesting part of it all is that wire dispatches say that the farmer realizes there is no hope of getting the girl to come back to him of her own free will, and is seeking the writ of habeas corpus in a last desperate effort to force her to come back.

What sort of father is it, one wonders, who wants to compel a child that did not love him to return to him? The answer, probably, is—the same sort of father who could lease his daughter out to pay a debt in the first place. The whole thing indicates a complete reversal of all ordinary paternal feelings. Selfishness sometimes leads people to do queer things. In this case, evidently, one man's callous insistence on his own wishes has brought a good deal of unhappiness to several innocent parties.

The Name of Arkansas

FROM the Ozark Moon column of the Fayetteville Daily Leader:

"Ozark Moon: I am not a precise old stickler but just the same it kills my soul to hear the word 'Arkansas' when referring to an 'Arkansawyer.' It takes away all the beauty of the word to make it into a hard, unmusical 'Arkansaw'; and I bet me a nickel this guy at Harrison weren't born and raised in Arkansas like I was. And if I ever see him, I hope I have on a coat with a big pocket full of brickbats.—I. L. N."

"I. L. N. Dear Cousin: Authority for 'Arkansaw' is the Gazette at Little Rock, self-styled 'Bible of Arkansas' (see full-page ad in Editor and Publisher). So if the Gazette says 'Arkansaw' the Harrison Times has to do likewise. But let's you and I say 'Arkansawyer,' huh?—Uncle Walt."

Cousin I. L. N. loses his bet on the "guy at Harrison," who was born and raised in northwest Arkansas where we throw rocks instead of brickbats.

And he and Uncle Walt have revealed themselves as members of an impious group who openly flaunt the state's "Bible" and probably take for their authority in spelling that impressive treatise, "A Slow Train Through Arkansas," widely circulated in places like Kansas and Chicago and other outlying territories. We might concede the silly "yer" if it soothes Cousin I. L. N.'s tonsils, but the Slow Train's "w" is out.—Harrison Times.

The 143rd Anniversary of the Constitution

TODAY completes the one hundred and forty-third year of the American Constitution.

It calls to mind the fact that any new government has two objectives: First, to win freedom from an old, oppressive rule; and, second, to preserve that liberty, safety, and happiness against all the troubles and dangers that beset a new nation.

The Declaration of Independence says: "The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States."

America overthrew this king following the signing of the Declaration of Independence. But the great constructive document that was to hold the Colonies together, and nurse this infant nation through poverty, fear, and wilderness, to wealth, security and civilization, was the Constitution.

Many of us think the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution occurred at the same time. But actually eleven years elapsed between the hour that America threw down the gauntlet to King George, and that day, after the war, when she was able to co-ordinate her civil government under one flag and one roof.

There is an object-lesson for good government, in this experience of our own nation. It is easier to fight under one flag than to live under it.

The test of a nation in war is courage; but the test of peace is patience and tolerance, respect for tradition and those fundamentals of good government that have come down to us from one hundred and forty-three years ago.

This is a year when the established order of things is severely tested. America suffers from her share of a business depression that is world-wide. People are impatient. In some lands they are violent. Because business was bad, two South American republics overturned their governments this summer. Peru locked up its president. Argentina, richest and most powerful of all the South Americas, had a disgraceful revolution in which the military overthrew the civil authorities. Here in the United States we find it difficult to understand such conflict. Our Anglo-Saxon heritage of faith in civil liberties and peaceful procedure, started us off on the right track many centuries ago; the Constitution, devised and enforced by our forefathers, brought us safely to maturity.

Lest we be too satisfied, however, Arthur Brisbane, a noted writer of sour editorials, calls attention to what he says are signs of commercial progress in Bolshevik Russia. Mr. Brisbane tells us that the Soviets will, within the next year, manufacture four billion cans of food; will make six billion cans the year following—and will place most of this on the world market at prices aimed to cut under the production of states opposed to Bolshevik theories.

Mr. Brisbane is unduly alarmed. The world is forever on the verge of discovering something to take the place of individual ambition and effort. All kinds of perfect states have been laid out on paper. Yet the only one actually achieved is in Russia, darkest, most ignorant, cruel and forbidding, of all the lands that white men live in.

We believe Russia is happier today than she was under the Czars. She is at least free—and most Americans would rather be free and poverty-stricken, than rich and enslaved.

But to imagine, as Mr. Brisbane does, that the time may come when Russia will rise to cut the throat of the rest of the world, is to defy the history of the white race, founded on civil liberty and encouraged by private initiative.

Russia presents an interesting challenge. But the cold facts of history only make the American story the more glorious. We have our distressing moments, but behind us lie one hundred and forty-three years of the greatest commercial race ever run. It is unlikely that we shall be headed off in the future.

For past performances, and for that promise of the future, we owe a debt today to the American Constitution and to the memory of the immortals who drafted it.—W.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Now that the wet-dry issue has been fogged in the Illinois senatorial contest between Ruth McCormick and Jim Ham Lewis because of Ruth's liberalized attitude and the Anti-Saloon League's hint that it may support a third candidate, you are invited to turn your eyes toward Massachusetts and its primaries of Sept. 16.

The Bay State will pick a successor to the retiring Senator Frederick Huntington Gillett and there are warm primary battles in each party.

The election contest may or may not be between a dry Republican and a wet Democrat. That depends on the primaries. In any event the Republican primary result will be considered extremely significant except by those to whom its significance gives nothing but a pain in the neck.

Wet-Dry Issue at Stake

The important point is whether the Republican party in Massachusetts is going to vote wet. If it does, Mr. Eben S. Draper will be nominated over Mr. William M. Butler and a wet Republican will fight it out with a wet Democrat this fall.

Commonly accepted theory about Massachusetts has been that a Republican must be dry to be nominated and wet to be elected. Just as Republican majorities are found in New York state outside of New York city, so is the greatest Republican strength in Massachusetts found in the counties and smaller communities outside the large wet cities.

So Butler, with his strong organization and his enthusiastic dry support, is likely to win. But Draper's assets include a militant wet minority within the party, a general lukewarmness toward Butler among Republicans and a feeling among politicians of both parties that Draper would be the stronger candidate against the Democratic nominee in November. Butler failed in a previous election campaign for the Senate, and since Al Smith carried Massachusetts in 1928 the idea has been prevalent in both Washington and Massachusetts that the prospects would never again be so bright for Butler as they were when he had the endorsement of his friend, President Coolidge, and lost nevertheless.

Draper has made prohibition the main issue in the campaign. Butler came out unequivocally dry not long after announcing his candidacy.

If Draper wins, both parties in Massachusetts will have to be considered wet until one of them proves differently. As far as senatorial elections go, the Anti-Saloon League will then be left holding the bag in three large, important states—Massachusetts, New Jersey and Illinois, where each of the six major party candidates will be unsatisfactory to the dries. And the Republican party in the nation, which doesn't look anywhere near as dry now as it did in 1928, will seem just so much more moist than before. Draper would take his place alongside Dwight Morrow as a symbol of flaming wet hope.

Five Seek Democratic Place

There are five candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination and the outstanding ones, according to reports received here, are Marcus A. Coolidge of Fitchburg and Joseph P. O'Connell of Boston, both wet.

Modern Caravels of Hope!

"Football" should be spelled with capital letters this season. Just for the sake of overemphasis.

A writer wonders what would become of financial and business experts if it were not for Gen. Trend and Maj. Turn. He should not forget Gen. Motors.

Jim Davis, candidate for senator in Pennsylvania, tooted a clarinet in the old home band the other day. On the assumption, perhaps, that next to promises, music is best to soothe the voter.

According to the latest yachting dope, the Shamrock will find it is in for a bargain sail.

A "talkie" with dialog entirely in sign language has been filmed for deaf mutes. At that we'll wager it won't be as dumb as many "talkies" we've seen.

To Buy Wood

Little Rock, Ark., September 15, 1930.

Mr. George Sandefur, Superintendent
 Hope Water and Light Company
 Hope, Arkansas

Dear Mr. Sandefur:

We have been advised by our Mr. Sales of the action of the Hope City Council in recommending that wood be purchased from now until March 15, 1931 for burning under one boiler in your electric power plant. This action comes very unexpectedly to us in view of the fact that the burning of gas in your plant has saved the citizens of Hope a good many thousands of dollars each year.

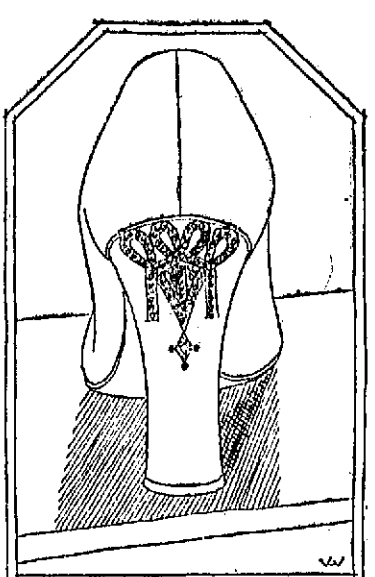

We do, however, appreciate the spirit of the members of the City Council in trying to work out some plan to relieve the distress in your community, brought about by the severe drought, although the plan adopted forces us to bear the brunt of the sacrifice made.

We appreciate

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

One breathes it to himself—an ugly thought;
And oh, how far it sped,
And oh, the evil that it wrought,
And the rank poison spread.
Lodged in his brain, the thought took root,
And all unknown, unheard,
The plant sent out its poison sheet.
The thought flowered in a word.
A whisper in the ear of a fond friend,
The word, with evil rife,
Went gathering foulness the world's end,
And blasted a great life.
Great evil is a book that flows unseen,
And broadens as it goes;
To cleanse the stream, means first to clean
The spring from which it flows.

The marriage of Miss Bessie Olmstead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Olmstead and Maxfield Keller of Hot Springs, La., was beautifully celebrated this morning at 10 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church in the presence of intimate friends and relatives. Dr. W. R. Anderson performed the nuptial rites, using the impressive double ring ceremony. During the assembling of the guests a program of beautiful nuptial music was played by Mrs. Kate Holland, who also played Mendelssohn's wedding march for the entrance of the bride and party. The bride entered on the arm of her father, W. H. Olmstead who gave her in marriage. She was unusually lovely in her wedding gown, a late model of brown wool lace, with matching accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of ferns and pernet roses, her only attendant, Mrs. Billy Duckett, who served as Matron of Honor, wore a model of black Canton crepe, black hat, gloves and slippers to match, she carried an arm bouquet of ferns and yellow roses, tied with yellow ribbons. Charles Keller of New Orleans, brother of the groom served as best man and Bennie Shipp and Billy Duckett served as ushers. The church was beautifully decorated with graduate baskets of graceful ferns and golden rods. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Olmstead of this city, is a graduate of the Hope High School and for the past few years has served as private secretary to the Superintendent of the L. & A. railroad. The groom is a graduate of the University of Louisiana and is now Superintendent of construction for the J. B. McCreary Co. of Atlanta, Ga. Immediately following the ceremony an informal reception was held in the church vestibule after which Mr. and Mrs. Keller left for a honeymoon trip to New Orleans and other points of interest in the South. They will be at home for a time in Minden, La. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keller of New Orleans.

The Oglesby P. T. A. held their initial meeting of the fall school term yesterday afternoon at the Oglesby school, with thirty-five mothers attending. The meeting was opened with a song by Mrs. Tully Henry, followed by the business period, when plans for the fair booth were discussed, naming Mrs. John Shiver as chairman. Reports were read by the Secretary and treasurer of the new mem-

THERE's a harmony between the natural loveliness of this modern age and the natural, mild goodness of Camels. And if you find them keeping company, don't be surprised.

Camel has given the world the luxury of a naturally mild cigarette—a cigarette that preserves all the refreshing fragrance of the choice, mild tobaccos from which it is made—a cigarette that is delightfully smooth, but never flat, never parched, never tasteless.

Modern smokers are awake to the fact that mere flatness doesn't mean mildness. That's one reason there's such a swing to Camels. Watch it right in your own crowd. Join them in Camels—a smoke that's enjoyable all the way—all the time.

you on time. And I hope you have a lovely trip."

"Oh, thank you!"

Margaret picked up the coral frock and went back to the sewing room. She had to go slowly, holding to the wall. She was horribly afraid another attack of weakness was coming on.

"You must not! You must not!" Margaret told herself determinedly.

She closed her eyes and the cool breeze touched her forehead. It was refreshing. She tried to breathe deeply and when she opened her eyes again the room was not reeling crazily but was steady.

A woman across the room watched her uncertainly.

"You don't look like you felt well, Margaret. Is there anything I can get for you? Maybe you'd better go in and lie down."

MRS. ROGERS shook her head.

"I'm all right," she insisted. "Nothing's the matter."

"When is it Celia starts to work?" her neighbor at the next table asked.

"Not until a week from Monday."

"Well, she's a fine girl," the other said. "I hope she's got a nice job!"

"Yes—I hope so," Mrs. Rogers agreed.

Tillie Dennison had worked in the fitting room longer than either of the other four. She was unmarried, outspoken, generally referred to as "an old maid." Tillie cared nothing for tact. Now she spoke up.

"Well, I've been meaning to say it for a long time and now I'm going to tell you, Margaret," she said. "I think it's a pity. If there's anything I hate to see it's a sweet young girl getting into the rut of working downtown day after day. Wearing out their prettiness and their nerves when they ought to be getting married and raising families."

"Tillie, don't talk like that!" It was the woman beside Miss Dennison who had interrupted her.

"I don't care. I mean it! Why, Margaret, suppose anything would happen to you? Who'd look after Celia?"

Margaret Rogers eyed the wall before her blankly.

"I don't know," she answered. "I don't know!" Then she bent her head to hide the fright that was in her eyes.

The others turned on Tillie Dennison indignantly. They said she had no right to say such things, that girls who worked in offices met lots of nice young men and plenty of them married. They defended Margaret, privately worrying at the same time.

There was still much to be done on the coral dress when it was hung away for the night. Mrs. Rogers was the last to leave the work room.

Celia had the evening meal ready when her mother arrived at the apartment. She thought that her mother looked tired. Margaret Rogers insisted she was not.

"It's just the heat," she explained. Later Barney came to take Celia for a drive.

"Yes," Mrs. Rogers nodded, "you young folks go alone. I'm going to read the newspaper."

But after they had gone she did not read. She got out paper and pen and ink. For a long time she stared at the blank sheet. Tillie Dennison's words rang in her ears: "Suppose something would happen—"

Margaret Rogers began to write rapidly.

OUT OUR WAY

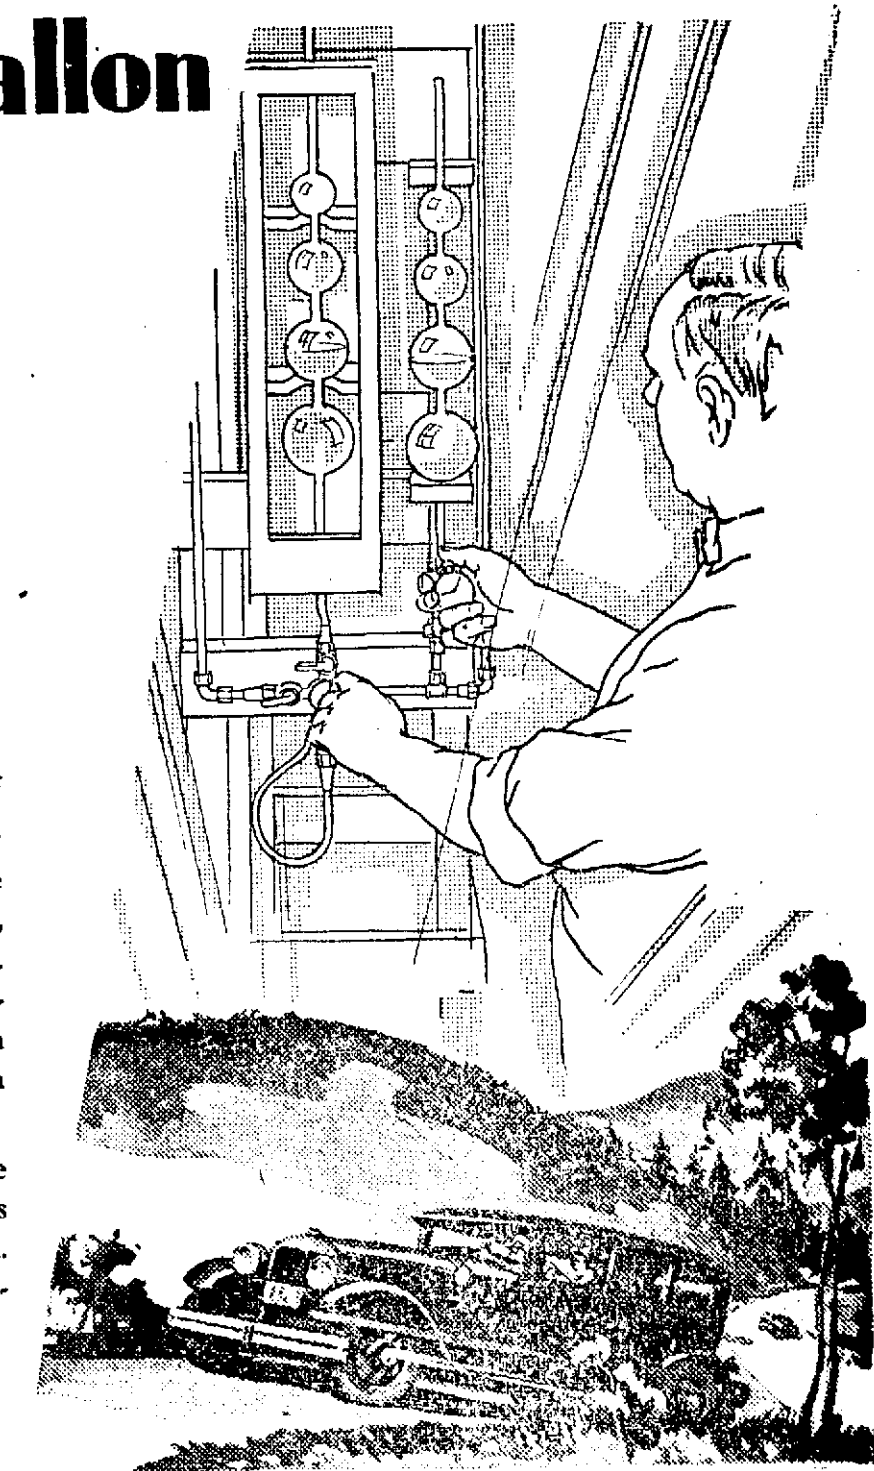

DEPENDABLE MILEAGE from every gallon

Hundreds of thousands of motorists have learned through experience that it pays, both in dependable motor performance and in low cost per mile, to stick to "Standard" Improved Gasoline. Summer and winter—in hot weather and cold—over rough roads and paved highways—they have found that this uniform-quality gasoline gives more for their money in motoring satisfaction.

There are definite reasons why this is so. Back of every gallon of "Standard" Improved Gasoline are the resources and experience of one of the world's great petroleum producing and manufacturing companies, with a laboratory famous throughout the industry for the meticulous care with which it inspects and guards the quality of every product which bears the "Standard" Name.

Before a "run" of "Standard" Improved Gasoline is approved for shipment to the filling stations, test after test and check after check are made. "Initial" and "end point"—fractional balance—absolute minimum of sulphur—freedom from gum and other impurities, etc., must conform to the rigid "Standard" Specifications.

The result is that you can buy with assurance the gasoline sold from any pump that bears the "Standard" Bars-and-Circle Trade-mark. This mark is your guaranty of unvarying quality. Better stick to "Standard."

Business Woman's Club Holds Meeting

Program Consisted of Talks on Finance For Individuals and Groups

The matter of finance, all-important to individuals and to groups, was the subject of discussion at the Hope B. & P. W. club meeting at the Hotel Barlow yesterday evening.

Mrs. Frank Hicks, chairman of the local finance committee, had charge of the program and reviewed a recent article by Chas. Mill De Forest, "How Old Are You Financially?" Just now, judging from the cry of hard times, many have not yet passed the swaddling age, though they may have been wage earners for years. Mr. De Forest says that any man or woman in the business or professional world may obtain financial independence and attain his highest possibilities in the systematic budgeting of his income, a certain percentage of which is regularly set aside and invested to form the nucleus of a savings account that is added to regularly and systematically.

Mrs. Chas. Walker discussed the question, "Is My Club Run on a Paying Basis?" "For any club to be independent financially and thereby enabled to accomplish its best work, adequate dues must be charged, a budget system and business-like methods used, no provision should be made for any activity unless the provisions of the budget are met and money raised outside of the club should be employed for civic activities only," said Mrs. Walker.

"This is a day of credit," said Miss Evelyn Lewis, in discussing "Are Charge Accounts a Convenience or a Temptation?" "If one's financial rating is consistently maintained, a charge account is no doubt a great convenience to the average salaried person; when it is disregarded it very soon becomes anything but that for which it was primarily intended. To many persons the ability to say 'Charge it, please,' is one form of a luxury, but it may lead into deep water if one's credit rating is not placed first in one's financial scheme. The partial payment plan may very soon develop into an 'eternal' payment affair that is not at all pleasant or desirable. But, the world is run on credit, as evidenced by the World War debt and the amounts many of us owe for cold drinks."

Miss Genie Chamberlain's subject was, "What Should Woman Know About Protective Insurance?" She discussed the different plans of life insurance, including the limited pay and endowment policy plans, and urged her listeners to take a little time to inform themselves on the subject as it is one of the most popular ways at the present time for investing savings and there are so many plans that any need or desire may be quickly and efficiently met.

Mrs. Hicks staged a clever automobile contest and a number tied for the prize, which was eventually won by Miss Thelma Joe Cobb.

During the business session, financial and financial problems were again discussed and it was decided to hold only one dinner meeting at the hotel each month, with the other regular meeting going to the home of a member, but the ordinary fee being paid therefor, this amount to go into the treasury. It is earnestly desired that an educational fund be developed as rapidly as possible, and this deemed the most advisable plan to pursue.

Plans for the Regional Conference to be held October 17, 18 and 19, were discussed by the state publicity chairman, Mrs. W. G. McDonald of Little Rock and a number of the Hope members are planning to attend the meeting.

Guests for the evening were Mrs. Nell Bush McPheeters of Prescott, who was with Miss Mary Ellington Arnold and Miss Mary Gaines Autrey who accompanied Elizabeth Harrison. Mrs. McPheeters told the club of her plans for the formation of a class in physical education and a number signified their intention to join.

Several matters of unfinished business were held over to the next meeting which will be held at the home of Miss Mary Arnold on North Hervey street, on the evening of October 7th, with Miss Arnold, leader. At that time active work will be started with the glee club, Mrs. Talbot Feild, leader.

A number of the teacher-members were present after the summer vacation period and the club promises to be very active throughout the winter months.

Little Rock Man El Dorado Suicide

Leaves Little Rock After Working Monday at Ice Plant

EL DORADO, Sept. 17.—Carson McDonald, aged 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen McDonald, 1900 East Capitol avenue, Little Rock, swallowed a quantity of poison in a rooming house here about 5 p. m. Tuesday and died an hour and a half later in a hospital.

McDonald, it is said, came here today after quitting his job with an ice company in Little Rock. He obtained a room in a rooming house this afternoon and immediately asked direction to the nearest drug store. He returned a few minutes later, went into his room and within a short time emerged again, telling the landlady that he had taken poison and requested an ambulance be called. He was taken to a hospital where emergency treatment was futile.

Carson McDonald was the brother of little Floella McDonald, who was murdered in the belfry of the Second Presbyterian church, Eighth and Scott streets, several years ago by Lonnie Dixon, negro, who later was executed.

The grief-stricken mother, Mrs. Owen McDonald, said last night Carson McDonald had brooded since last November, when he and his wife, Mrs. Annie McDonald, 2722 High street separated. He was employed at the independent ice company plant, Third and Rock streets, leaving there after working hours Monday. Mrs. McDonald said she learned he spent the night with a friend and early yesterday left for El Dorado. She was at a loss to explain his reason for leaving Little Rock.

Woman Is Ruler of British Islands

Widow With Six Children Governs In Distinctive Fashion

LONDON, Sept. 17.—(UP)—A widow with six children, Mrs. Dudley Beaumont, holds the distinction of being the only woman governor within the British Empire possessing full administrative powers.

Mrs. Beaumont, who holds the title of the Dame of Sark, rules the Island of Sark which consists of less than 300 acres with a population of approximately 600. It is one of the Channel group of islands.

She presides over a parliament which meets thrice yearly and supervises finances of the island where taxes still are paid in kind and the houses assessed according to the number of their chimneys. Because of her position, she alone on the island is allowed to keep doves.

The children of Sark are not taught that their island was conquered by Britain and they pay homage to the Duke of Normandy who is King George. All addresses and petitions to him are sent to "Le Roi, notre Duc."

According to philologists the people of Sark speak the purest Norman-French to be heard anywhere and faithfully preserve the speech of William the Conqueror and his followers.

Tin Cans and Lily-Pools

Editor The Star: I notice in your paper that the board of health has been looking in private lily-pools for mosquitoes, but found no evidence there.

These pools are made to beautify the home place, and are not likely to contain mosquito-breeding larvae, as the gold-fish is a great enemy of larvae.

Why not look in the back-yards of some of our citizens for tin cans? Or put your ear to the catch-basins on the newly-paved streets. You may find some mosquitoes there.

New Ford Convertible Cabriolet

A striking sport car. Finished in Raven Black, Washington Blue, and Stone Brown, with steel-spoke wheels in a harmonizing color. Upholstery is genuine leather. Distinctive tan top has natural wood bows. Rumble seat, cowl lights, trunk rack, side fender-well for spare wheel, and front and rear bumpers are standard equipment.

The words De Luxe are a fitting description of the beautiful new body types now on display at the show-rooms of Ford dealers. Everywhere they have met with distinguished favor because of their striking lines and colors and the quiet richness of the upholstery, trimming and appointments.

These new de luxe bodies are offered in addition to the standard Ford line and include the De Luxe Roadster, De Luxe Phaeton, De Luxe Sedan, De Luxe Coupe, Town Sedan and Convertible Cabriolet.

The De Luxe Roadster and De Luxe Phaeton are upholstered in genuine Bedouin grain leather, in tan harmonizing with the swaggar tops. The spare wheel is carried forward on the left. The new colors for these two types are Raven Black, Washington Blue, and Stone Brown. The wheels are finished in a complementary color. The De Luxe Sedan, De Luxe Coupe and Town Sedan are upholstered in soft luxurious mohair or Bedford cord, optional with the purchaser.

Plan to see these new de luxe bodies this week and arrange for a demonstration. You will find much to admire in their sprightly appearance and the high quality so evident in every detail.
